* (2) The Effect of COVID-19 Pandemic on the Lives of Filipinos

“Dynamic mindset and cooperation”

We always think that a tragedy, crisis or pandemic is bad no matter what situation we are in. Some people with dynamic mindset on the other hand, think that for any situation, there's always a positive in a majorly negative situation. Now that the pandemic is not as severe as it used to be, let's try to recall and think about the damage it's done to our daily lives.

At the start of February 2020, Covid-19 starts to spread in the Philippines, more quickly than we've anticipated it to be. Public and private schools has to shutdown even up to the point of until the next school year. Almost everyone has to stay in their home. From provinces, cities, to the whole country and the whole world declared total lockdown.

A few months after the lockdown, economy is slowly going down, many people died and are in hospital, still can't go outside. Scientist finally started to develop a vaccine for Covid-19 but it's unlikely that they would be able to finish it in under 10 years. We feel like all hope is lost at this time.

People tend to dislike this situation they are in. However, in about a year, everyone in our country is ready to take vaccines. Whether you are a child or an adult, you can take the vaccine. We eventually found a couple of ways to earn money to sustain our family without risking our lives by going outside. Cryptocurrency mining, establishing business through the use of internet, and much more. Young people can learn and be educated again with the help of technology. Lastly, we are very close in ending this pandemic and the government started to declare that we can go outside with some safety precautions.

What we think was the end of the world, is slowly fading away as time goes on. We learned that nothing is impossible if we just cooperate and help each other. We must not lose hope, we should be strong, think positive, and we will overcome this pandemic.
